Legislation

Various pieces of legislation place statutory obligations on the keepers of bovines, sheep, goats, pigs and farmed deer to keep records of movements and in the case of some species births, deaths and ages.

Failure to meet with these various statutory obligations render those keeping or managing livestock at risk of committing criminal offences or a reduction in your single farm payment. For further information contact the Local Authority quoted on the front cover of this book.

Notification of holdings

Owners or persons in charge of bovines, pigs, sheep, goats and farmed deer must be registered with Animal Health and Veterinary Laboratories Agency. You should also notify any changes in respect of the species of livestock kept i.e. additional species kept or given up.

Livestock markets

Livestock markets are "Holdings" for the purposes of animal movement records.

Changes of ownership - stock not moved off holding

Whereby individual animals change ownership but do not move from a holding as a result, an entry should be made in the records maintained by both "seller" and "buyer". This is particularly important when animals are traded privately at livestock markets or shows/sales.

Retention of records

The original records must be retained for a statutory minimum period of 10 years from the last date of entry. Veterinary medicines – 5 years.

Entries - timescale

Statutory obligations require entries to be made:

- Movement of Animals within 36 hours after the movement separate entry for each movement
- In the case of the birth of a bovine, in a dairy herd within 7 days of birth, for other herds within 30 days of birth
- In the case of the death of a bovine within 7 days of the death
- In the case of a replacement ear tag where the ear tag number is changed – within 36 hours of the replacement

NB: Please make a separate entry (i.e. one line per animal) for every event/movement where animals are required to be identified individually.
